Largest Drug Store in Canada Operated By Canadian Army Corps Is Doing A Big Job

A SMALL rectangular box lay on its side on the fifth floor, where a Japanese guard kept it as a memento. One of a group of Canadian soldiers—prisoners of war taken at Hong Kong and kept—moved over to where it fell. The remainder of the hallway—nagged by a guard—watched closely. It walked around the box and turned the box over. "From Central Medical Store, Ottawa," he read aloud. "Here it is followed—medicines!"

They gathered around it. In a few minutes the lid was off and the contents, carefully lifted out, were being examined. The first plain bandages, an assortment of gauze, iodine, they knew that by sight—a box that said "soldiers' guards"—and a box that contained the precious words, "Doctors of War Vitamin Tablets."

There was much more—ointments, aspirin tablets, natural antibiotics and medical supplies of almost every type. It must lie to the group of Canadian soldiers who had thus far survived the treatment of the Japanese instrument camps. That it is a grim and harsh scene. It could have been taken from any Japanese concentration camp shortly after Hong Kong. Some of the prisoners—released—did not. But the survivors will remember for all time that happy time "Central Medical Store" that appeared to them as a sign of life.

This "largest drug store" is in Ottawa, Canada, occupying five large buildings in Ottawa's business district. The men and women of Canada's three services wherever they may be present and all types of medical supplies. The fighting men of Canada's Army make a move in the far away Borneo battlefields, the doctors are there to see that the plan, as carefully as the formula of attack itself—the steady and regular supply of irreplaceable medical supplies to the men in the front lines. It is not over-looked quite the corner drug store. It is the big business with the Central Medical Store. They figure, shipping out an average of approximately 1,000,000 pounds of medical supplies a month.

Operated by men of the Canadian Forces Medical Corps, the store is more than just a job. It's one of the most important industries of the war. It is the store that supplies the medical supplies to the men in the front lines. It is not over-looked quite the corner drug store. It is the big business with the Central Medical Store. They figure, shipping out an average of approximately 1,000,000 pounds of medical supplies a month.

Britain's Soldier-Genius

Later Major-General "Wingate" Always Looking For Adventure. The late Major-General Denis Wingate, Britain's soldier-genius, was born at Nairn, 1880, five years before the outbreak of the First World War. He was educated at Eton and Sandhurst, and was one of the world's best-read generals. He always sought out hard fighting.

When serving in Palestine, he spent his leave in a Jewish settlement, and learned to speak, read and write Hebrew fluently. In the Sudan he mastered several Arabic dialects. The line of adventure ran deep in his blood. As a lieutenant, ordered to proceed from England to the Sudan, he crossed Europe via the Alps on foot, and was captured by the Germans. He was released by the British, and he was one of the world's best-read generals. He always sought out hard fighting.

The Age Of Electricity Expected To Bring A New Era Of Comfort For The Man On The Farm

With "age of electricity" about to reach up with Canada's wealth and bring a new era of comfort. Every province in Canada was drafting large-scale schemes to harness water power, as post-war measures aimed at encouraging electrification, and to provide the energy needed to exploit the country's rich resources lying unexplored in the woods, under the ground and on virgin land.

Blood Plasma Gives Wounded Men Strength For Operation

An Associated Press despatch from the Canadian hospital in Italy says: This is the shock ward of an emergency hospital where blood plasma has replaced the carbide.

All through the day and night bearers have come in from the various front lines. In 24 hours, 100 patients have been treated.

The latter bearers take the wounded to the ward, such as carpenters, and when every inch of space is taken they spill over into adjoining wards.

When a man is hit he goes "in shock." His blood pressure and his pulse beat increase. Unless he can be brought out of the shock he can't survive an operation, and that is where plasma comes in.

You walk down the long, brightly lit ward where blood plasma is used, and you can pull through. Plasma does it. It is used from Ohio take in ten units of plasma and come back from the flutty edges of death.

Pleasure Trippers

Crowded coaches, men and women of the armed forces standing in the aisles and leaning against the seats: these are familiar sights on Canadian railway trains these days. After four and a half years of war, and when all facilities are strained to provide transportation for the aviation forces of war, essential travel should be of the books. Passenger trains everywhere are crowded enough with essential travellers without having "pleasure trippers" tagging along as well.—National Film Board photo.

How To Cut Bread So Loaf Will Be Repaired
What a beating some loaves of bread take! Four slices off the end and there's a crumbly mess. Try slicing evenly down to the crumb crust. Then slice it. Hold the loaf on its side. . . then the crust is usually firm. . . then with a sharp knife saw it out. Watch the side toward you and if the slice is straight there the rest of the loaf of bread will be fine.

The Returned Soldier

He Value To The Country Cannot Be Paid In Terms Of Dollars

A warning to neither bonus money nor job will be enough to entice soldiers after this war was delivered to the American Psychiatric Association at Philadelphia by Major-General G. H. Childs, director-general of Canadian medical services.

The most damaging thing will be when the returning boys will demand that the community live up to the changes.

"For some time," the general said, "the soldier will have been accustomed to regarding himself as an important part of a great asset to his country, and highly skilled by his immediate surroundings with essential training without having 'pleasure trippers' tagging along as well.—National Film Board photo."
